

SpaceX sheds $600B in market value amid debt-funding plans

Jun 23, 2026, 3:24 AM ET | Space Exploration Technologies Corp. (SPCX) Stock | By: Preeti Singh, SA News Editor

SpaceX (SPCX) shares tumbled for a third consecutive session on Monday as investors reacted to the company's plans to enter the investment-grade bond market, a move expected to support its growing artificial intelligence and infrastructure ambitions.

The stock fell 16.4% to close at $154.60, its lowest level since debuting on the public market. The decline extended SpaceX's three-day slide to 23%, wiping out more than $600B in market value.

Despite the selloff, SpaceX still commands a market capitalization of just over $2T.

The rocket, satellite, and AI company on Monday announced the commencement of its inaugural offering of senior unsecured notes. The firm is seeking to raise at least $20B from the first bond offering, Bloomberg reported last week, a move expected to help fund a major expansion of its AI and computing infrastructure.

Separately, SpaceX said Monday it has signed a multibillion-dollar agreement to provide computing resources to Reflection AI, underscoring the company's push to become a major player in artificial intelligence alongside its core space and satellite businesses.

Wow, imagine the world's biggest ever float and three days later they astound investors with a bond-market raise plan.

Wasn't it Captain Bligh who said "the beatings shall continue until morale has improved." I guess SpaceX must have hired him to be the captain of the Starship... but somehow he got turned around, wandered into the investor relations office by accident and now..... ooooooops..... stock price is getting slurped into an investment black hole.

Run.

I have serious questions as to revenue still for SPCX ...they do have revenue ! They even have a product! If #starlink came standard on every TSLA that would definitely matter. #starlink does have retail now. Barrely ...one store maybe! If that suddenly started to roll out tho generate foot traffic obliterate the cell phone idio forever ...hasn't been done yet tho. Telecom services in a War Zone like Europe versus Russia and vice versa? That's crazy valuable. Again I haven't seen any serious numbers yet anyways. Long AAPL strong buy. #distributed_data_center love that idea ...that's Tesla tho not SPCX it could be both need some type of connectivity for that.

The IPO worked as planned, transfer of shekels from Joe six pack to the Epstein class. If you couldn't see it I don't know what to tell you.

@Hard_Right_Jay The difference between greed and ambition is subtle yet fundamental. Musk understands it far better than his typical SpaceX investor. So of course he ends up with the money while everyone else is left holding an empty bag.

@saratogasfinest Seems to confirm some bearish commentary that AI is now a race to the bottom. There is a subtle distinction between capex spending and making money. The market got the two things badly mixed up but eventually, rationality returns with a vengeance and when it does, retirement dreams are enslaved and then eaten by the Klingon Empire.

@saratogasfinest well to be fair, this bond issuance was planned and announced prior to the IPO. People got distracted by the hype.

SpaceX already wants to issue $20 billion in unsecured debt, as if the $85 billion raised from the IPO weren't enough. I guess SpaceX shareholders are getting tired of this situation. It's time to show some profit. You can't pay dividends with fairy tales.

@Eugenio Catone wow, tired already? It's been less than a week. It took Tesla 18 years to become profitable. It took 9 years for Amazon to become profitable. Space x is making money.

@Thunder12 SpaceX was founded 24 years ago. They were making money actually, but then the xAI division stepped in. In my opinion they should stick with their original business model, therefore space and connectivity.

@Eugenio Catone Yes, but what you fail to understand is the total addressable market for spacing connectivity is a much smaller market cap than SpaceX has. Musk is kind of a grifter but he's no fool. He needed a bigger Tam to justify the giant market cap

And yet it's still more than $600B too expensive.
